New York--Switzerland-based display and packing company Pac Team Group recently acquired Lansa SA and its subsidiaries, which supply retail pricing systems for luxury retailers around the world.

Also headquartered in Switzerland, Lansa has been in business for more than 70 years, its products widely distributed across Europe and Asia.

The company's pricing systems are comprised of individual units that easily can be assembled to create various prices, predominately used for watches, jewelry, leather, shoes, perfume and eyewear.

The acquisition of Lansa complements the luxury display and packaging offerings of Pac Team Group, furthering its turn-key solutions for various merchandising needs, the company said. Pac Team's U.S. office, based in Paramus, N.J., officially will launch Lansa Americas this month.

"Like Pac Team, Lansa's Swiss heritage and dedication to quality and customer service makes them a perfect addition to our group. We are pleased that their renowned products will now be more easily available to retailers throughout the Americas," Pac Team America President Eric Zuckerman said.
